Steve Owen... A and T Coach

Steve Owen has been a Giant for 26 years, as an all-time tackle of professional football, and as coach. He first saw the sights of New York in 1926, with the Kansas City Cowboys, a team which toured the country in wild west garb. Today, Steve is part of the big town, yet he has lost none of the characteristic zest and humor which he carried under a 10-gallon hat when he first arrived from native Oklahoma.

This season Owen is at one of his periodic peaks. He was acclaimed Coach-of-the-Year for 1950 in the National Football League. But success doesn't delude Steve.

"Coaching is like being a monkey-on-a-stick," he comments. "When you are going up you always see somebody going down. And vice versa," he adds drily.

Owen teaches the everlasting kind of football, the contact sport based on block and tackle, quick-thinking, exquisite precision, and above all, on the eagerness of players to HIT!

He was called a defensive coach, the "policeman" of the league, when he did not approve the brush-block, foot-race, air-circus football which had ephemeral crowd appeal some time back.

It would be more exact to term him a coach who, in any game, can play his hand the way it is dealt, and make the most of it. He is resourceful, in brief, with or without the ball, as he demonstrated last season with the marvelous "umbrella" pass defense, and with starling high-scoring shifts from a basic T formation to his A-formation single wing.

Owen was born on April 21, 1898, at Cleo Springs, Oklahoma, in the pioneer land of the Cherokee Strip, where Indians, outlaws bound for the bad lands, and United States marshalls in pursuit, were a part of life. Steve enjoyed a romantic youth, as a wrestler of renown in a wrestling state, and as a worker in the Texas oil fields and on cattle ranges which the railheads had not yet reached.

He first played football at Phillips U. in Enid, Oklahoma, in 1918, under Johnny Maulbetsch, of undying fame at Michigan. He was captain and tackle of the great Giant team of 1927, which allowed 13 opponents a total of 20 points, a record never approached.

Steve became coach in 1931, and ever since, in the fashion of early Oklahoma, he has judged players by their acts as men, and not by their "names", so that his teams, whatever their luck, always know how to play their hand as it is dealt, and make the most of it.

What the Crystal Ball Shows

The Giants point for the American Conference championship of the National Football League, which they missed so narrowly in 1950, with the expectation of a much deeper and more varied offense, high hope indeed for a team which three times scored more than 50 points last season!

The club is so fortunate because Steve Owen, coach, believed he could hold the line on defense with returning key veterans, and therefore concentrated on attack in the selection of college stars.

"Kyle Rote will be a wonderful running mate for Ed Price, and we should pick up offensive depth down the line with most notable improvement at end", is Owen's sumup.

Price, rookie from LSU was fourth best rusher in 1950 and led the Giants to the ground-gaining title. Wonder-man Rote obviously will boost the potential of Owen's dynamic overland game.

The Giants started 1950 with Bill Swiacki their only reliable pass-catcher until brilliant rookie Bob McChesney charged up. Bob Wilkinson, Charles Hubbard, Bob Hudson, and Alan Pfeifer join those two. Ray Krouse, Herb Hannah, and Jack Stroud were among the mighty offensive collegiate tackles last fall. Two veteran clear-out guards from other teams, Fritz Barzilauskas and Earl Murray were signed. Center is firmly held by John Rapacz and Dick Woodard.

Joe Scott, Forrest Griffith, Jim Ostendarp, and Stonewall Jackson are holdover backs of distinction, and none could ask more at quarterback than Charlie Conerly and Travis Tidwell, twin directors of both the A formation and the T formation.

The vaunted defense is in the hands of Arnie Weinmeister, Ray Poole, Kelley Mote, Jim Duncan, Al DeRogatis, Jon Baker, John Mastrangelo, John Cannady, Tom Landry, Harmon Rowe, Otto Schnellbacher, and Emlen Tunnell, the men who last year made good their boast, "They shall not Pass!"

The Giants last year, won two knuckle-down, nose-in-dirt suspense thrillers over the champion Cleveland Browns from the T by 6-0 and 17-13. They won two more payoff T matches from the defending Philadelphia Eagles by 7-3 and 9-7. In between, in a month's span, they switched to Owen's A formation for three scoring sprees which bettered 50 points!

They won 10, lost 2, for a tie in the division and dropped the playoff — by an offside — by 8-3 in Cleveland. With the anticipated boost in offense, this team could achieve the most glorious feats in the 27 year history of the Giants.

Luck of the Draw — Kyle Rote

The Giants were lucky to get Kyle Rote, one of the fabulous college players of history, but as Steve Owen says, it's often much better to be lucky than to be good. Owen plucked the marked slip out of the hat in the "bonus pick" drawing last winter, which entitled New York to first selection of the graduating gridiron heroes.

The coach thereupon announced "Rote" only as a formality. He didn't have to say; everybody knew it would be Rote, because every club wanted Rote. Seldom has a man so dominated his game. The great back of SMU already was a legend in the Southwest, and a national figure not only for his surpassing deeds on the field, but for his representation on innumerable magazine covers and in the press from coast to coast.

An enterprising Texas historian some day may list all the honors showered on his fellow Lone Star personage. Here, we have space only for a few.

Rote was voted the Sportsmanship Trophy of the Southwest Conference. . . . Named captain of the 1950 All-American team. . . . Acclaimed for the outstanding athletic feat by a Texan in this century. . . . Most valuable high school player at Thomas Jefferson of San Antonio in '46. . . . Southwesterner of the Year. . . . Touchdown Club Award. . . . Outstanding player in the East-West game in San Francisco. . . . and so on, and on . . .

The dauntless Texan will be forever remembered for his grim fight against four-year-unbeaten Notre Dame in the Cotton Bowl at Dallas in 1949, where, in a rare display of football virtuosity, he seemed to stand single-handed against one of the renowned teams of all time, and fall only one point shy with his three touchdowns.

That was not accident; just a climax. Rote is the one-in-a-million player who can win anywhere, on the field, and in any circumstances, and do it game after game. Last year he rushed for 762 yards, gained 490 yards forward passing, caught passes for 221 yards, and returned kickoffs for 336 yards.

It is not strange that Owen, so conservative in appraisal of a rookie, was willing to proclaim Rote the most versatile back the Giants have had since Tuffy Leemans, one of the original members of the professional Hall-of-Fame.

With the Giants, the "Mighty Mustang" will wear the identical uniform number, 44, which he emblazoned in the minds of fans throughout the country while at SMU, and he will have the change to make it as celebrated in the Polo Grounds as Leemans made No. 4.

The Nation's Finest Rookies

Herman Hickman, Yale coach who directed the College All-Stars against the Cleveland Browns in the annual pro-amateur curtain-raising spectacle in Chicago, discovered prospective Giants wherever he looked in the country while collecting his squad of 1950 campus glamor boys.

Hickman, with his spontaneous humor, quipped to Steve Owen: "You and I are either very good pickers or very bad pickers, because whenever I figure I need a boy for my team, I often find you picked him first."

Herman wasn't kidding. The Giants went for quality first, regardless of classification for military service and while the great majority of the new Giants will play this year, the fans may have to wait a while for some. But those they see, whenever they see them, will be the best.

Hickman, in his original list for the All-Stars, settled on 10 Giants, probably an unprecedented tribute to one team in the 18 year history of the game. The Chicago Tribune, sponsor of the colorful event, commented critically that the Giants had one of the finest groups of rookies ever gathered in the nation.

The new Giants present a record of achievement. . . . Ten All-Stars. . . . Six of All-American ranking. . . . Five in the East-West game. . . . Six in the Senior Bowl. . . . And nearer home, four All-Eastern choices.

The names on the Giant selection list are headline names — no description of their feats is needed: Kyle Rote of SMU, Bob Wilkinson of UCLA, Alan Pfeifer of Fordham, Reds Bagnell and Bernie Lemonick of Penn, Holland Donan of Princeton, Jack Stroud and Bud Sherrod of Tennessee, Herb Hannah of Alabama, Bob Hudson of Clemson, Everett Grandelius of Michigan State, Ray Krouse of Maryland, Charlie Hubbard of Morris Harvey, Bill Albright of Wisconsin, Paul Douglass of Illinois, and Bill Stribling of Mississippi.

Of them all, Rote, as a great, indomitable back, and Wilkinson, as a fiery, sensational pass-catcher among ends whom Owen rates the finest since Jim Poole, Jim Lee Howell, Will Walls and Chuck Gelatka in 1941, may first claim the homage of the crowd.

But all will do their part to infuse the fresh, hot-running blood of youth, the essential of any professional team, into the Giants, and to make the sparkling and surprising team of 1950, with its all-rookie backfield, even younger in 1951.

Bob Wilkinson

Twice-Armed is Well Armed

The crack forward passer is a player beyond price. The team with the good arm can strike through the air, and also set up a dynamic running game which would find only a stone wall before it without the arm to help.

The Giants are twice-armed and therefore well armed to have Charley Conerly and Travis Tidwell. These two are more than passers and more than quarterbacks. They are among the most versatile men in the game, and they are masterminds too.

Charley Conerly

Both Conerly and Tidwell are slick ball-handlers in either the T formation, as quarterbacks, or in the A formation single wing, as left halfbacks.

They are field directors of both systems also, because Steve Owen is reluctant to call plays from the bench, and prefers to rely on his signal-caller, in best position to see, to ferret the weaknesses in the defense from play to play.

The coach goes over general strategy with Conerly and Tidwell before a game, confers with them while on defense, and relays important phone information to them instantly, but he wants his man on the field to be the boss, to hold the respect of his own team and of the opposition.

Oddly, Conerly was a single wing man at Mississippi, and learned the T with Owen, while Tidwell was a T-man at Auburn and mastered the single wing with the Giants.

Conerly rewrote the national collegiate passing records as an All-America at Ole Miss in 1947, and was rookie-of-the-year in the National Football League in 1948. In that season he set an all-time league record for most passes in one game, by completing 36 out of 53 against Pittsburgh. He made the difficult switch from single wing to T in 1949, and is the clutch man when time's a-fading and a touchdown is sorely needed.

Travis Tidwell

Tidwell led the nation in total offense at Auburn in 1946, but an ankle injury suffered in baseball hampered his effectiveness for the subsequent two years.

He regained full competence in 1949, to be voted the most valuable player in the Southeastern Conference, and rate the No. 1 Giant draft pick. This season, with a year of invaluable experience behind him, Tidwell with Conerly gives the Giants a four-way scoring menace — two arms working from either of two systems.

An Umbrella for Defense

In recent years, an umbrella became the international symbol of appeasement, but the Giants make it mean "they shall not pass!" The term umbrella is applied to the Owen pass defense, so spectacular last year in its seven basic variations, and which returns intact for '51.

Otto Schnellbacher, Emlen Tunnell, Tom Landry and Harmon Rowe comprise the "umbrella quartet". Their amazing ball-hawking made it possible to restrain opposing aerial scoring to 11 touchdowns in 13 games — with six of those allowed in 50-point Giant runaways!

The name was applied because of the resemblance to an opening umbrella when Rowe and Landry, shallow and wide at halfback, and Schnellbacher and Tunnell, deeper in a dual safety, fell back and spread out for air defense. The impression was heightened when the ends, Ray Poole and Jim Duncan, also dropped off to convoy potential receivers under the umbrella.

Otto Schnellbacher

The fantastic feat of the umbrella defenders was to hold the terroristic air attack of the champion Browns scoreless in three games. All football was stunned when Otto Graham of Cleveland failed to complete any of 10 attempts, and suffered three interceptions, in the first half of the 6-0 New York win. When Graham, with short throws, moved inside the 10-yard line twice in the fourth period, Landry and Schnellbacher thwarted Dante Lavelli and Horace Gillom on touchdown tries. Against the Giants, Graham's completion average was 44; against the rest it was 56%.

The Giants averaged 21 points per game, and allowed 12 points, in 1950, for a nice working margin of "for" over "against." But once upon a time Owen was known strictly as a defensive coach. He answered critics in 1948, when he had his highest-scoring team — but also the one which allowed most points! After a 52-37 whipping by the Rams, Owen quipped to the press in the locker-room: "Fellows, it's a good thing I am such a great defensive coach. If I weren't they would never be able to get the Rams' points on the scoreboard today!"

Owen used to say: "What's wrong with defense; isn't it still half of the game?"

Last season Owen not only put that point across, but convinced the critics defense can be flashy too.

The defense also is reliable and always with a team, he points out, while offense can stutter any time. So Steve will continue piling up 20-odd points, confident that will do because of his umbrella against a rainy day.

When a Fellow Needs a Foe

The marvelous rivalry between the Giants and the champion Cleveland Browns is a miracle of football. A good "feud", such as the eastern classic series between the Giants and the Redskins, generally must be cultivated for years to develop fan appreciation.

But the Giants and the Browns just went BOOM! They had a rivalry born full grown when they first met last Fall, and their coming matches loom as vibrant super specials of 1951.

Otto Graham

Only the Giants defeated the champions last year in two out of three games, allowing Cleveland only one touchdown, scored after recovery of a free ball on the 1 yard line.

Had any other club been able to whip the Browns, New York would have won the American Conference title. Instead, the Giants tied and lost the playoff on a frozen field in Cleveland by 8-3 when a needless offside canceled a touchdown which would have, at that point, made it 6-3 for Steve Owen's team.

The Giants stunned the football world in the opener in Cleveland by inflicting the only shutout on the Browns in their lordly five-year history. Ed Price made it 6-0 in the first period and the vaunted "umbrella" defense thereafter blunted the menacing aerial forays of Otto Graham, peerless Cleveland quarterback.

In the Polo Grounds, the Browns led at halftime by 13-3 after recovery of an unprotected kick-off on the Giants 1 yard line. Charley Conerly drove the Giants on a spirited, smashing ground offensive in the second half to win 17-13.

In the three meetings, Giant defense held Marion Motley, league-leading ground-gainer to a total of 86 yards and Graham to 288 yards via air.

The Giants renew long-standing series with five opponents this season. They have the advantage on all. They lead the Chicago Cardinals by 13 won, four lost, since 1926. They topped the Philadelphia Eagles by 21 won, 12 lost and one tied, and the Pittsburgh Steelers by 19-11-1, since 1933. Against the Redskins, their "traditional" foe, the Giants won 17, lost 11, tied one, since 1937. They hold a seven won, two lost, two tied record against the Yanks, in Boston and New York.

But the "baby" rivalry with the Browns may mean most this season. Continued success against the Champs could make the Giants the big boys once more.

$2,500—A Sports Best Buy

Timothy J. Mara, founder of the Giants, had no thought of football when he visited the Leggett Bldg., at Vanderbilt Ave. and 42nd St., New York, in the Spring of 1925. In fact, he points out he knew nothing about football. Mara was trying to buy the contract of Gene Tunney. He didn't get the heavyweight champ, but he took on a football club, which through years of industry and perseverance, became one of the great champs of its game.

Mara bought the franchise from Joe Carr, president of the NFL. He was impressed by Carr's conviction the new enterprise would boom if it only had a New York team. Also, the asking price was only $2,500 and what was that for a sports hobby?

L. to R. John Mara, Tim Mara, Wellington Mara

Bob Folwell, ex-Annapolis, and 24 former collegians were hired to provide Mara's diversion in the Polo Grounds. It sure was a diversion! By mid-season the innocent-looking hobby had cost $50,000. At times in '25 tickets could not be given away!

However, Harold (Red) Grange, most publicized college back of the era, joined the Chicago Bears in December, and appeared in the Polo Grounds. The crowd was estimated at 73,000, but it could not be counted accurately, because thousands scaled the walls, poured through fences and stampeded the gates.

That success was illusory. Grange in the following season hurt, rather than helped the NFL by founding a rival league.

The first steady attendance at the Polo Grounds began in 1929. The founder then presented the club to his sons, John V., president and treasurer, and Wellington T., vice-president and secretary, who achieved mounting popularity for their game year by year.

But the flash-flood public approval of the Grange day did not return until the most recent Giant championship year, 1946, when an average of 50,000 saw the team in eight games, and the title match with the Bears set the all-time play-off record of $286,955.25. That 1925 deal for $2,500 had become one of the best buys in sports!

Add 11 Parts, Mix Well...

Take the Giants, add 11 teams and mix well, and you have the greatest league in football history. But the National Football League for many years was not great, nor even much of a league.

The present coast-to-coast setup of two six-team conferences under Bert Bell, commissioner, is the result of the restless probing through the country over the years in search of the highest possible level for this national sport.

Bert Bell

The glamor of the game attracted many cities which could not hold the pace, and many celebrated names — Massillon Tigers, Canton Bull Dogs, Frankford Yellow Jackets, Kansas City Cowboys, Portsmouth Spartans, Providence Steamrollers — which are only memories, but all played an essential pioneering role after the league was launched in 1921 with Joe Carr as president.

Let's run down the list of the dauntless dozen which exist today. The Giants are the oldest club in the east, and have been owned by one family since the founding in '25.

The Chicago Bears, under George Halas, and the Green Bay Packers, under civic sponsorship, are charter members of '21. The Giants established an eastern rivalry to match the Bears-Packers feud when George P. Marshall in '32 in Boston organized the Redskins, whom he moved to Washington five years later.

Arthur J. Rooney brought the game to Pittsburgh with the Steelers in '32. In the same year, the late Charles Bidwill (NOTE: Bidwill is correct) bought the Chicago Cardinals franchise (dating from '21) and the club continues under direction of his widow and son.

Daniel F. Reeves first took over the Rams in Cleveland in '41 and moved them to Los Angeles five years later. Ted Collins settled his Yanks in Boston in '44, and shifted to New York in '49. The Lions syndicate headed by D. Lyle Fife three years ago took over a franchise dating to '34 in Detroit. Another syndicate, with J. P. Clark as president, two years ago gained control of the Philadelphia Eagles launched by Bell in '33. Finally, in 1950, the two titans of the disbanded All America Conference, the champion Cleveland Browns, owned by Arthur J. McBride, and the San Francisco Forty-Niners, owned by Anthony J. Morabito, both originated in '46, rounded out the dauntless dozen which constitute the most powerful football league in history.

Stars Shining Brightest

Who are the great stars of the Giants, the all-time heroes? Steve Owen, who missed only the first of the club's 27 years, is best fitted to say. The coach selects 23 men, excluding present Giants. It's not an offensive team not a defensive platoon — but both! Every player is a 60-minute man. As Owen comments: "Any 11 of them could play a game — without help." Here they are, from all quarters of the nation:

QUARTERBACKS: Ed Danowski, Fordham. Bennie Friedman, Michigan. Cecil Griggs, Sherman (Tex.) College. Jack Haggerty, Georgetown.

HALFBACKS: Tuffy Leemans, George Washington. Kink Richards, Simpson (Ia.) College. Ward Cuff, Marquette. Hinkey Haines, Penn State.

FULLBACKS: Ken Strong, N.Y.U. Jack McBride, Syracuse. Phil White, Oklahoma.

ENDS: Jim Poole, Mississippi. Ray Flaherty, Gonzaga. Morris Badgro, U. S. C.

TACKLES Al Blozis, Georgetown. Ed Widseth, Minnesota. Cal Hubbard, Centenary.

GUARDS: Len Younce, Oregon State. John Dell Isola, Fordham. Butch Gibson, Grove City (Pa.) College.

CENTERS: Mel Hein, Washington State. George Murtagh, Georgetown. Joe Alexander, Syracuse.

Mel Hein

The squad is scaled to the T, current Giant basic formation, and Owen therefore places at quarterback four men who played as single wing left halfbacks. All four would be at quarter today, he believes, because of their unerring passing and shrewd signal-calling.

From his A-formation single wing, the coach selects two "quarterbacks" who were his finest blocking backs, Nello Falaschi of Santa Clara and Leland Shafer of Kansas State. He names two more for special distinction, Dale Burnett of Emporia (Kans.) State Teachers, as most effective pass receiver, and Kay Eakin of Arkansas, as most brilliant punter. Other "bests", from the all-time squad, are Hein as a tackler, Cuff at field goals, Strong at kickoffs, Danowski at passing.

Of all the stars shining brightest in Giant memory, Owen perhaps has highest regard for Hein. "He played longer (15 years) than any Giant, and was coached less," Owen summed up. "Coaching him was like telling Babe Ruth how to hit."

A to Z of Giant Titles

The Giants won their Conference championship eight times, in 1933-34-35-38-39-41-44-46, and the world championship three times, in 1927-34-38. Here is the complete list of players on those teams:

Scene of Action

The historic Polo Grounds, scene of every Giant home game for 27 years, is one of the finest places to view football in the country. Because of the narrow rectangular construction of the plant, illustrated in the diagram, fans on both sidelines are much closer to the play than is possible in the conventional baseball park or football bowl. The stands, incidentally, seat 47,000, and up to 10,000 temporary field seats may be installed.

POLO GROUNDS

Many great contests which will forever remain in football lore have been fought by the Giants in the venerable arena on the banks of the Harlem in upper Manhattan, but the sentimental one of all must be the last game in which the fabulous Knute Rockne directed his celebrated Four Horsemen of Notre Dame. This was a special match between the Giants and the Rockne All-Stars which raised $115,000 for the unemployed of New York in the depression. Three months later the beloved coach lost his life in a plane crash in a Kansas corn field.

Doubtless the most dramatic of all Giant feats in the Polo Grounds was the storied "sneaker" game on an icy field in 1934, against the Chicago Bears for the championship of the world.

The mighty Bears had won 34 straight, and were huge favorites. They took a halftime lead of 13-3, and the Giants seemed to have little chance.

However, Steve Owen outfoxed George Halas, Chicago coach, during the intermission. He sent messengers to nearby Manhattan College to get sneaker shoes, which he believed would grip the icy turf better than cleats.

When the teams came down the clubhouse stairs for the second half, several Bears noted the Giant footgear. "Step on their toes," said Halas.

This was no remedy as the sure-footed Giants sped to a 30-13 win, for one of the great upsets in the history of the league.

The home of football drama, and the best place to see the show — that's the Polo Grounds, scene of the Giant battle for 27 years.

Sweat, Toil and Tears Too

Here, just before turning to the players, is the ideal spot to introduce the threesome which moulds those men into a team under direction of Steve Owen. These assistance coaches are Al Sherman, backs, Ed Kolman, line, and Jim Lee Howell, ends.

These are the aides, who, after the grand strategy for the season or the game is devised, get down to earth with the personnel to make it work. Their lot is the sweat and the toil — and the tears, too, when the goal is not attained.

All three command the respect which athletes accord only to those who have also played the game. Sherman, former lefthanded passer and field general of the Philadelphia Eagles, was lauded and recommended by Greasy Neal for his thorough grasp of the tactics of the T. Kolman for six years was one of the mighty Chicago Bears, and ranks among the great tackles of that team. Howell was a premier end with the Giants for eight years.

Sherman, 29, helped the Giants install the T for '49. He had already coached at St. Joseph's Prep in Philadelphia, at Gettysburg (Pa.) College, and had won the American Football League championship with the Paterson (N.J.) Panthers, who put up an 11-1 record.

Kolman, a native of Greenpoint, Brooklyn, was all-met at Boys High, and All-America at Temple U. Ed missed the '48 season because of injury. He tried a comeback with the Giants in '49, and his tutoring influence on the young Giant line turned him to coaching.

Howell, former state senator from Arkansas, last played in '48, and joined Owen's staff the following year. The 8-1 record, best in its history, which Wagner College of Staten Island reached under his direction in '49 was a minor miracle in New York football.

These three coaches have achieved a perfect understanding and teamwork in translating Giant theory into action.

ENDS

JIM DUNCAN

Wake Forest

25

205

6'2"

Duncan was one of the redoubtable defensive ends who wrecked enemy formations in 1950 and he's cast for the same role this year. Jim was drafted by both the Chicago Bears and Cleveland Browns before he came to the Giants. He was a 50 minute player at Wake Forest in 1950 despite the two-platoon system there. Duncan won four football and four basketball letters at Reidsville (N.C.) H.S., and attended Duke a year before going to Wake Forest.

CHARLES HUBBARD

Morris-Harvey

23

205

6'2"

Here is the star receiving of unbeaten Morris-Harvey last year. Hubbard caught 23 passes for an average of 25 yards and 10 touchdowns in the season and accounted for three touchdowns on four receptions in the Tangerine Bowl victory. He is a speedy, all-around athlete, who competed in basketball and at hurdling as well as football.

BOB HUDSON

Clemson

21

215

6'4"

Bob played offense and defense for Clemson, Orange Bowl winner and was key receiver of a team which used the pass sparingly. Frank Howard, Clemson coach tabs him an outstanding professional prospect. At track, Hudson ran the 100 and 220 and was a shot putter and discus thrower. With his size and speed he is a distinguished candidate on the highest-voltage end corps the Giants have had in years.

KELLEY MOTE

Duke

28

190

6'2"

Versatile? That's Mote all over! He's the invaluable utility man of the end squad, who can play either wing, on offense or defense. He came to the Giants last season in a trade with Detroit. In 1948, he was rated one of the South's greatest flankers, was All-Southern and Duke captain, and helped the South whip the North. He has a master's degree in physical education.

ALAN PFEIFER

Fordham

23

200

6'1"

Ed Danowski, all-time Giant passer, and now coach at his alma mater, Fordham, stated Pfeifer had the best chance of any of the rugged Rams to star in professional ball. Alan is one of the leading college receivers of all time with 95 receptions in three years. He made almost every All-East team, played in the North-South game, and was named to the Chicago All-Star squad.

ENDS (Cont.)

RAY POOLE

Mississippi

29

215

6'3"

Brother Jim founded the Poole tradition at end for the Giants and Ray carries on with all of the family's accustomed class. Ray's speed, size, and savvy made him likely the most devastating defensive wingman in the league last year. Poole did not appear on attack in 1950, but he's always available. Two years ago, he gained 277 yards on 25 passes thrown by his old college chum and teammate at Ole Miss, Chuck Conerly.

BILL STRIBLING

23

207

6'2"

The "Bill" in Stribling's name is something he picked up. His proper handle is Majure Blanks. The Giants were so impressed with Bill as a junior that they drafted him after the 1949 season for 1951 delivery. He was one of the consistently excellent ends of the Southeastern Conference. Stribling matriculated in 1945 and was regular left end as a freshman. He spent the next two seasons in the Army, and returned to Mississippi to resume his football career at right end.

BILL SWIACKI

Columbia

26

195

6'2"

In three years, Swiacki has caught more passes than any other Giant in history. This master of the "impossible" catch has a total of 106. Bill first came to fame when he ended the winning streak of Army in 1947, with a fantastic diving, decisive reception in the end zone of Baker Field for Columbia. The photo of that catch was one of the most widely circulated sports pictures of all time. Swiacki is a rising young insurance agent of Southbridge, Mass. so it looks as if he knows how to catch more than passes.

BOB WILKINSON

UCLA

24

210

6'3"

Steve Owen calls Wilkinson the top pass-catching end prospect the Giants have signed in years. In fact, Owen believes that Wilkinson and other prize rookies noted above, will fill out the best end squad the club has had since 1941. Wilkinson was All-Pacific Coast the past two years. He was nominated for the East-West, Senior Bowl, and Chicago All-Star games. In 1949, he set a new reception record for the Coast Conference. Last season, when UCLA did not have a star passer, Wilkinson played an average of 50 minutes on offense and defense. He played basketball. He was officially timed for the 100 yards in 9.9. He is a champion water skier.

TACKLES

WILLIAM ALBRIGHT

Wisconsin

22

232

6'1"

Here is a chap who loves football. He is fast, rough and durable, and played an average of 50 minutes per game last season. He spent six weeks in training at a Marine platoon leader school before reporting to camp. Bill was all-city and all-state high school choice in his native Racine, Wis. He was a shot-putter of note at Wisconsin. Red Smith, former Giant assistant coach, recommended Albright.

AL DE ROGATIS

Duke

24

240

6'4"

The Giants can claim as dauntless and as talented a pair of tackles as the league possesses in De Rogatis and Arnie Weinmeister. At Duke, Al was an All-Southern selection and was on the first team All-American chosen in a national players' poll. He was an outstanding star in the East-West game in San Francisco, and more than fulfilled collegiate promise in two years as a professional.

HERB HANNAH

Alabama

29

220

6'3"

There was no football in Hannah's life until he finished a five-year tour in the Naval Air Force and matriculated at Alabama. He was however, a natural for the sport, and was heralded last season as the best blocker and downfield man in the Southeastern Conference. Herb was picked sixth in the draft, and is counted on to perk up the offense.

RAY KROUSE

Maryland

24

250

6'3"

The No. 2 Giant draft pick began collecting "all" honors as a sophomore, and attained national stature in his senior year. Andy Gustafson, coach of Miami, commented last Fall: "Our fellows couldn't move Krouse at all." Played in the North-South and All-Star games. A giant of a tackle at 250 pounds who should fit into the Giant picture.

ARNIE WEINMEISTER

Washington

26

235

6'4"

In Weinmeister the Giants have one of the most colorful and accomplished tackles of their history. Arnie is one of the few line players who can captivate the fans the way a runner or passer does. His tremendous speed, and his intuition on a play, much in the Mel Hein manner, make him a marked man on the field. Weinmeister was the No. 1 Giant selection from the player pool of former Yankees when the All-America Conference disbanded for the 1950 season. He played full-back as well as tackle in college.

Sketches of the GIANTS

GUARDS

JON BAKER

California

28

215

6'2"

Giant fans say Baker reminds them of Bill Edwards of Baylor, star guard on the great young team of 1941 which broke up to go to war. Baker, agile and prescient, is a terror up the middle on defense. Quarterbacks don't like him. Jon played five years at California, in a football career interrupted by the war, and was All Pacific Coast and All America. Bob Tessier, boss of the California line, termed Baker the best guard he ever coached.

FRITZ BARZILASKAS

Yale

230

6'1"

The Giant coaching staff took a liking to the crisp, fast-starting, hard-hitting offensive work of Barzilauskas for the Boston Yanks, and obtained his services for the 1950 season. Fritz, however, had to retire a year to organize his new auto agency in Waterbury, Conn. He returns this season as a key blocker on the attack. He was All-America tackle at Yale, and shifted to guard soon after the Yanks drafted him No. 1 for the 1947 season.

JOHN MASTRANGELO

Notre Dame

25

235

6'3"

This mighty defensive guard played for three coaches at Notre Dame, Hugh Devore, Ed McKeever and Frank Leahy, and is under his third professional coach with the Giants. He was with John Michelosen of the Pittsburgh Steelers and Red Strader of the New York Yankees before being selected by Steve Owen in the agreement which ended the All-America Conference.

EARL MURRAY

Purdue

25

240

6'2"

When the Baltimore Colts disbanded in January, the Giants nabbed their outstanding offensive and defensive guard, Murray. Stu Holcomb also used Earl with or without the ball at Purdue, although the two-platoon system was in effect there in Murray's senior year, 1949. This fellow has speed. He was the 440-yard high school champion of Indiana, and played T formation fullback in high school.

GUARDS (Cont.)

JOE SULAITIS	Dickinson H. S.	30	215	6'2"
---------------------	-----------------	----	-----	------

Rare indeed is the chap who can jump from high school football into the pros, but this former Jersey City, N. J., athlete did it and made it stick — for eight years. He is the "dean" of the squad, and the most versatile player. In 1948 he caught 26 passes at end. In 1948 he was strictly a linebacker. Last year he was offensive guard. He also is blocking back in the A formation, and can fill in almost anywhere in emergency.

CENTERS

JOHN CANNADY	Indiana	27	225	6'2"
---------------------	---------	----	-----	------

Ask Marion Motley about Cannady! John's job was to stop the Cleveland fullback who led the league in rushing. For three games Motley gained a meager total of 86 yards. Cannady is a line-backer who will stand favorable comparison with any in the league. He has a great "nose" for a play, seldom is trapped, and is a deadly tackler.

JOHN RAPACZ	Oklahoma	26	260	6'4"

This former titan of the All-America Conference joined the Giants for 1950, after Steve Owen made him No. 1 pick in the draft of players from the disbanded rival circuit. Dick was All-America at Oklahoma in 1947, and was recognized as the top defensive center of the AAC with Chicago. Rapacz is an ace on offense with the Giants, and also takes a hand on defense.

DICK WOODARD	Iowa	25	225	6'2"

Rounding out the formidable center corps is this former star of the Big Ten, who played with the Los Angeles Dons before coming to the Giants last season. Woodard is a versatile center who plays offense and defense, and who also can be used at defensive end. Dick originally was a fullback in college, and packs the speed of a ball-carrier in his line duties.

QUARTERBACKS

CHARLES CONERLY

Mississippi

27

185

6'1"

Conerly rewrote the nation's collegiate forward passing records in his senior year (1947) at Ole Miss, and he has maintained the habit as a professional. He holds the National Football League record for most passes completed in one game, 36, and he has, in three years, surpassed the marks of his illustrious predecessors on the Giants. Charley was All-America at Mississippi, and was Rookie-of-the-Year in the NFL in 1948. Off the field Conerly is a rising young cotton farmer in his home town of Clarksdale, Miss. He founded this venture with money earned at football. Chuck was asked in 1949, to make the difficult transition from single wing halfback to T formation quarterback. He achieved the feat with distinction and now is a peerless and versatile field director of the T and Steve Owen's A formation single wing.

TRAVIS TIDWELL

Auburn

26

185

5'10"

Unlike Conerly, Tidwell came up as a T quarterback, but just like Chuck, he learned a second system, the A formation, so that in his second season as a professional he is a master of both. Tidwell is a running threat as well as a passing menace, and averaged 4.6 yards on 29 attempts last fall. He was the No. 1 Giant draft choice for 1950, and came up to the NFL as the most valuable player of the Southeastern Conference. In his freshman season, 1946, Travis led the nation in total offense. An ankle injury sustained at baseball in the spring of 1947, hampered his efficiency for two years, but he regained full power for 1949, and was voted the outstanding player in the Blue-Gray and Senior Bowl post-season games.

HALFBACKS

JOHN AMBERG

Kansas

22

195

5'11"

The Giants were so pleased with Forrest Griffith, rookie halfback last year, that they went right back to Kansas to pick his successor on that team, Amberg. The young speedy halfback he was a fullback at college, comes highly recommended by still another Kansan on the Giants, Otto Schnellbacher. The latter not only saw Amberg play, but also played against him, in the annual varsity-alumni game.

HALFBACKS (Cont.)

EVERETT GRANDELIUS	Michigan State	22	195	6'
---------------------------	-----------------------	-----------	------------	-----------

"Sonny" Grandelius is the 17th player in collegiate history to gain 1,000 yards or more in a season. His total was 1,023, for a 6.3-yard average in 1950. He scored 11 touchdowns running, and one on a pass. The arial score was in the 14-7 win over Michigan. Grandelius was All-America on two national news service teams, he won the Governor of Michigan Award as outstanding player of that state, and was voted the Michigan Athlete of the Year for all sports. Sonny was on the dean's list as an outstanding scholar, and won the annual college award for combined excellence in sports and studies. He was All-Michigan prep school player in '46, and won a boxing letter as a heavyweight at college.

FORREST GRIFFITH	Kansas	22	190	5'11"
-------------------------	---------------	-----------	------------	--------------

Right half is Griffith's "official" position, but he can play fullback and left half in the T, too. Forrest is the niftiest cutback star the Giants have had in years. He was All-Big Seven Conference fullback three times, and marked himself as a "clutch" man when yards were desperately needed, with the Giants last year. Was a teammate of Otto Schnellbacher in 1947, in his sophomore year, when Kansas soared to national prominence.

THOMAS LANDRY	Texas	26	195	6'1"
----------------------	--------------	-----------	------------	-------------

As one of the marvelous "umbrella" defense quartet, Landry saw virtually no offensive action in 1950, but he is an attacking agent of high quality, and was both T quarterback and fullback at Texas. Landry also was one of football's top punters in college and served the Giants well in that role, with 58 kicks. He was a stand-out member of the now disbanded Yankees of the All-America Conference in 1949. His tackling technique is a work of art.

JAMES OSTENDARP	Bucknell	26	178	5'8"
------------------------	-----------------	-----------	------------	-------------

As a Giant rookie in 1950, Ostendarp proved as elusive a runner as he had been in college. He had an eight-yard average for his 18 attempts, and is scheduled for much more work as a professional "soph." At Bucknell in 1949, Jim had an average of more than 100 yards per game, and scored two touchdowns. Hooks Mylin, Bucknell coach, recommended Ostendarp as one of the top backs in "small" college circles.

KYLE ROTE

Southern Methodist 23 195 6'

The "Mighty Mustang" is one of the most famous and most publicized college players of all time. He was desired by all clubs of the NFL, but the Giants had the luck to draw him in the bonus pick. Rote was most valuable player at Thomas Jefferson H. S. in San Antonio in 1946, and has been showered with honors ever since. His most celebrated stand was against Notre Dame, in the Cotton Bowl, in the final game of 1949, when his spirited and spectacular drive for three touchdowns failed by one point to gain a tie, and by two of snapping the four-year Irish unbeaten streak. Kyle was a unanimous All-America player, he won the Sportsmanship Trophy of the Southwest Conference, and among many other distinctions, was voted to have achieved the outstanding athletic performance by a Texan in this century. Rote has proved his ability to play professional minor league baseball, during the past summer, and on many an occasion has held his own at golf with the nation's leading pros. Kyle is married and is father of a boy born on Christmas.

HARMON ROWE

San Francisco 28 182 6'

Rowe is another of the celebrated halfbacks of the Giants "umbrella" defense. He has, however, also demonstrated high quality as an offensive back in the T at Baylor in 1941 and at the U. of San Francisco after the war, when he was mustered out of the Navy. Rowe played three years with the Yankees of the former All-America Conference, before joining the Giants last year.

JOHN SALSCHIEDER

St. Thomas 26 185 5'10"

The kickoff return leader of the NFL in 1949, Salschieder was victim of a leg injury in camp last year, and was forced to forego football for the season. Jack, former little All-America selection in college because of his rushing average of 10 yards per try, for close to 1,000 yards, is completely recovered. He is ready to resume his sensational work of '49 in which he achieved a 31.6-yard average for 15 runbacks. Most spectacular was one for 95 yards and a touchdown which sparked the Giants to a comeback thriller by 41-38 over the Cardinals.

OTTO SCHNELLBACHER

Kansas 28 185 6'2"

This former star end who became known as "The Claw" for his pass defense finesse at halfback in the All-America Conference, is one of the four "umbrella" specialists of the Giants. Last season Otto intercepted nine passes for 99 yards. In the AAC he set a record of 11 interceptions. Schnellbacher was All-Big Seven offensive end at Kansas in '46 and '47, and received All-America mention. He was twice All America forward at basketball. He played with the Yankees two years before shifting to the Giants.

JOSEPH SCOTT

San Francisco

25

195

6'1"

Speed, strength and a smooth change of pace make Scott a dangerous long-gaming back —rushing, receiving or on runbacks of kicks. Last season he averaged 4.5 yards on 72 rushes, caught nine passes for a 26.7 average, toted one punt back 23 yards, and 14 kickoffs for an average of 25.1 yards. He led the league returning kickoffs in his first season. Joe is a versatile back who shifts with ease from T to A formation.

EMLEN TUNNELL

Iowa

26

183

6'1"

This great defensive back was the whole show at safety for the Giants in 1949. He returned two interceptions and one punt for touchdowns. He stole 10 enemy aerials for an average runback of 25 yards. He ran back 26 punts 315 yards. Last year, he teamed with Otto Schnellbacher on the back line of defense, and intercepted seven passes for a 23.9 average runback. He again was the punt return specialist, and handled 31 kicks. Tunnell is a jarring, sure-fire tackler who prefers defense over offense.

FULLBACKS

ROBERT JACKSON

N. Carolina A. & T.

26

210

5'11"

A Giant discovery last season was this speed and power runner from a small Negro college in North Carolina. "Stonewall" broke into the offensive lineup towards the end of the season, and proved a breakaway expert. He averaged 9.4 yards for his 12 rushing attempts, and scored two touchdowns on long runs.

EDDIE PRICE

Tulane

26

190

5'11"

All Southeastern Conference, All Southern and finally All America honors came to Price for his sensational ground gaining with the Green Wave, and he upheld his reputation by ranking fourth in the NFL last season, as a rookie, with 703 yards and a 5.6-yard average. At Tulane he gained over 1,000 yards in two consecutive seasons, with 1,178 in '48, and 1,137 in '49, with an average in both years which was over six yards. The record, both as amateur and professional, clearly reveals not only superior running ability, but the consistency of performance and willingness to take a beating, which distinguishes the great back from the good one.
